

Okaparnis Story Quest Epilogue – Calmed the Stormy Seas!

Over the next couple months, you, Tira, Antonio, Kira (Tira's mom), Rooft, and a few of the remaining city-folk completely fix how the city deals with its sewage. Now there is a water treatment plant where the oysters that Kira brought have been put to work in order to filter out many of the nutrients that were causing the red tide. The damage done has begun to reverse itself and there are even some new fish coming back into the bay. It will still take some time for everything to return to normal, but already the good news is spreading; the people who left are starting to return...

Tira has decided to stay with her mom in Corto Vanail. They frequently go the reef to study marine life and Tira said she even saw her dolphin friends! They must've found out that she had moved because they all came to join her. She looks so happy now...

Antonio has decided that Corto Vanail is far too busy of a city for him; he prefers the quieter kinds of towns, so he has chosen to return to Okaparnis.

Everyone in Corto Vanail seems so happy and peaceful that you decide it's time to say goodbye and accompany Antonio back to Okaparnis.

It's a long journey, but along the way, you revisit most of the places you saw before... Hottentots got is deserted, but you see the monks swimming as you head toward the Bonsai Garden, so you know the fruit feast must be close. When you reach the Bonsai Garden, Grapple tells you that they have more than enough food for the monks, so you may pick some fruit from his tree! Lucky you!

After that, you head back toward Florief and the Sunflower Pirates. Solidaster is still the captain, but now that the tours have started again, he can sail around the ocean as he pleases without having to worry about his friends and family in Florief. In fact, Antonio gets a very happy surprise when he hears the flowers singing again! You land on the coast and then run up the hill. When you reach the top you see the most spectacular sight; it's like a rainbow of glittering gemstones. There are all kinds of colors and the flowers are moving in waves as they sing and dance. You can't believe your eyes. Antonio even starts to tear up a little before you head back toward Okaparnis.

Okaparnis has changed, too. Rather than everyone being on edge, people are far more relaxed now. You see fishermen laughing and making fun of each other as they lure in boots instead of fish. You even chuckle a bit when one gets pulled into the ocean by a playful dolphin. The innkeeper and her cat are doing well, too. She says that life has returned to normal in this town and that, although the business was good when the people from Corto Vanail were here, she prefers the peace and quiet that they have now.

Congratulations, learners! You have finished the Okaparnis Story Quest. You should be very proud of yourselves. The journey was long and, at times, quite a challenge.

As a result of your hard work and courage, the Innkeeper has said that 1 of your friends and family may stay with her in Okaparnis, and Rooft has said that 2 of them may stay in Corto Vanail! You've helped save 3 more of your friends and family!

You have also obtained 300 Stars as well as the, "Calmed the Stormy Seas" Reputation!
